

To Whom It May Concern,

Letter of Recommendation for Dr. Gil Neuman

It is a privilege to write in support of Dr. Gil Neuman's application for a fellowship position. I have had the opportunity to work alongside Dr. Neuman during his residency in the Ophthalmology Department at Shaare Zedek Medical Center, which he began in February 2021. From the outset, he distinguished himself with his dedication, clinical acumen, and eagerness to learn.

Dr. Neuman is an exceptionally talented physician and surgeon. He possesses remarkable analytical skills and a strong scientific foundation, which, combined with his keen ability to quickly grasp complex concepts, make him an invaluable asset in both clinical and academic settings. His surgical proficiency is particularly noteworthy, as he demonstrates exceptional dexterity and the ability to master new techniques with impressive speed. In addition, Dr. Neuman is extremely intelligent, with outstanding problem-solving abilities and a sharp analytical mind that allow him to navigate complex medical challenges with confidence and precision.

Beyond his clinical and surgical excellence, Dr. Neuman is deeply involved in all aspects of our department's activities, including patient care, teaching, and research. He has represented our department with distinction at both national and international scientific meetings, including the Israeli Cataract Society and the ASCRS Annual Meeting, where he was awarded 'Best Paper of the Session.' His presentations are consistently well-structured, engaging, and tailored to his audience.

Dr. Neuman's commitment to research is equally commendable. He has initiated multiple research projects and contributed significantly to others, applying his strong background in mathematics and statistics to advance scientific inquiry within our department. In addition, during my tenure as chairman of the Israeli Society of Cataract Surgery, Dr. Neuman played a pivotal role in collecting and analyzing national data from ophthalmology departments and cataract surgeons across the country. His meticulous approach and analytical expertise were invaluable to this effort.

Dr. Neuman is a dedicated and reliable colleague, highly organized, and committed to excellence in patient care. His professionalism and collaborative nature make him a pleasure to work with, and he is well respected by both colleagues and patients alike. I have no doubt that he will excel in his fellowship and will make significant contributions to the department in which he trains.

Furthermore, we would be privileged if, after completing his training, he chooses to return and join our department.

Sincerely,
Adi Abulafia, MD
